SEYMOUR DAILY REPUBLICAN

VOLUME XXXIII NO. 42 — SEYMOUR, INDIANA, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1914. — PRICE TWO CENTS

CONVENTIONS TO BE HELD SATURDAY

Republicans of Various Townships Will Elect Precinct Committeemen and District Delegates.

AT SEYMOUR FRIDAY NIGHT

Great Gathering of Republicans is Planned for February 12 at Indianapolis.

Republicans throughout the county are showing a lively interest in the various township conventions which will be held this week. The time and place of each convention have been set by the county chairman and in each township precinct committeemen will be chosen and delegates elected to the district convention which will be held at Greensburg Tuesday, February 10.

In all the townships, with the exception of Jackson, the convention will be held Saturday afternoon. The convention in Jackson township has been fixed for Friday evening, February 6 at 7:30 o'clock. This time was designated as a larger number of Republicans could be present than if the meeting were held in the afternoon. Every Republican in the township is urged to attend this meeting and assist in the selection of the committeemen and delegates. Ten precinct committeemen will be chosen and four delegates will be elected for the district convention.

Republicans throughout the county are enthusiatic over the prospects for the coming campaign. After the factional differences of the last campaign there is a general desire among the members of the party for harmony and from all parts of the county come the reports that the Republicans are anxious to enter the fight and cooperate for the success of the party.

After the precinct committeemen are elected the reorganization of the county committee will take place. The Republicans of this county want to make more than a fight for offices this year. They believe in the principles of the Republican party and want to see those policies adopted again in the state and national government. They further realize that this cannot be done unless there is cooperation among the members in each precinct for the precincts are the foundation of the political organization.

A Republican of national reputation will speak at the district convention at Greensburg which promises to be one of the best meetings in many respects ever held by the organization in the Fourth congressional district. Judge John M. Lewis, chairman of the district, is a candidate for reelection and there is little likelihood of any one opposing him at this date. While one or more possible candidates have been mentioned they have not announced and it is highly probably that Judge Lewis will be chosen again for this office.

On February 12 there will be a great meeting of Republicans at Indianapolis. Ex-Governor Augustus E. Wilson of Kentucky, has been secured for an address in the afternoon and in the evening the annual banquet of the Republican Editorial Association will be held. A number of addresses by well known Republicans will be delivered at that time. Arrangements have been made to accomodate others beside the members of the editorial association and the banquet promises to be one of the most successful ever held by the association.

Republicans are invited to attend the meeting at Indianapolis February 12 as the addresses will be inspiring and the work of the party in the coming campaign will be outlined.

NEW LICENSE TAGS MUST BE SHOWN ON AUTOMOBILES

New Tags Have Blue Background With White Figures—Must File Applications.

The notice of automobile owners has been called to the fact that the old license tags issued for the last half of 1913 are no longer good and must be replaced with the 1914 tags. The tags issued by the secretary of state for the year are blue with white numbers. The old tags were yellow with black letters.

The secretary of state has given notice that the applications for new licenses must be made out the same as last year. Some of the applicants have written for a new license referring only to their previous number. In such cases the autoists have been informed that they must fill out the blank before a notary public giving the complete description of their machine. It will be unlawful to run a machine on the public highways unless it bears the new number, as the old license tags expired the first of the year.

M'BRIBE IN JAIL AT BLOOMINGTON

Ex-convict, Known to Local Police as "Skeeter," Arrested for Breaking Into Store.

CITY FIREMEN REMEMBER HIM

Escaped From County Jail After Being Arrested Here for Burglary —Served Two Years.

Joseph McBride, of Bedford, who is known in local police circles as "Skeeter", has been arrested again at Bloomington for breaking into a second hand store. Burglarizing business houses is a favorite past time for McBride and he seems to devote a large portion of his spare time when not serving a sentence in the Indiana reformatory. His term of two years expired a few months ago, but he was paroled before the term was completed.

McBride broke into notoriety in Seymour a few years ago when he and his partner, McQueen, attempted to enter a saloon. The men were seen hanging around the saloon and the members of the fire department were notified. Both men were armed to the teeth but the firemen succeeded in taking McBride. McQueen appeared to be free with the use of his revolver and in the mixup he broke away and escaped. He would never have made his escape but the officer who was holding him started to assist in the disarming of McBride.

McBride was taken to the Brownstown jail and remained there several weeks but made his escape by sawing the bars at the window. McQueen was afterwards captured near St. Louis and returned to Jackson county. A reward was offered for his arrest.

McBride was sentenced to the Indiana reformatory but was paroled and it is reported that he has been suspicioned of several robberies at Mitchell and other places since he was released. Last November he was married but his wife says they have never gone to housekeeping and that she has been living with her brother.

McBride told the Bloomington police he was twenty-seven years of age. He is willing to take a reformatory sentence of from two to fourteen years, it is said, but is reluctant about pleading guilty to housebreaking which carries with it a sentence of ten years.

McBride's wife went to Bloomington after her husband's arrest, according to the newspapers, and talked freely of his past career. McBride is known to the police and sheriffs of several southern Indiana counties and is known as a "bad" man.

RUNYAN TO TAKE WITNESS STAND

Defendant in Stull Murder Case Expected to Testify in His Own Behalf This Afternoon.

PLEA OF SELF DEFENSE

Miss Roxie Hart, Cousin of Mrs. Runyan, Denied Improper Relations With Defendant.

By United Press.

Crawfordsville, Ind., February 4—Walter Runyan, defendant in the Stull murder case, was expected to take the stand late this afternoon in his own behalf. He is charged with having murdered Arlie Stull but in defense claims the fatal shot was fired in self defense.

Miss Roxie Hart, of Centralia, Ill., a cousin of Mrs. Runyan, finished her testimony today. She testified that she had visited at the Runyan home several times and admitted a flirtation with Runyan but insisted that there was nothing improper between herself and the defendant. The sate conducted a rigid cross-examination but the attractive young witness maintained a cool demeanor and answered the questions in a well modulated voice.

Miss Hart admitted that she had kissed and hugged Runyan and said the affection had been shown in the presence of his wife but that the latter did not object. "It was just his way," she told the jury in explanation of the action. She admitted that she had met the defendant at Champaign, Ill., and that he greeted her with a kiss. She denied that they stayed at a hotel. Runyan's attorneys believe that Miss Hart made a strong witness for the defense.

Considerable interest is shown in the defendant's testimony, parts of which it is expected will be sensational.

MEXICAN BORDER EMBARGO LIFTED

Munitions of War Now May Cross Freely.

DECISIVE ACTION IS TAKEN

In Order to Give the Mexicans an Opportunity to Press the Arbitrament of Arms to a Definite and Speedy Conclusion, the President Has Rescinded Order Forbidding Shipment of Munitions of War Over Border.

Mexico City, Feb. 4.—The greatest excitement prevails here over the proclamation of President Wilson lifting the embargo on the exportation of arms from the United States to Mexico. All the government officials refuse to talk on the subject.

Washington, Feb. 4.—President Wilson has issued an executive order lifting the embargo on the shipment of arms from the United States into Mexico. This means that Carranza and the Constitutionalists will now have full access to the supply of arms and ammunition in markets on this side of the Rio Grande. Steps already have been taken by the Constitutionalists to start the flow of war munitions across the border at once. The immediate effect of the president's action probably will be more widespread disorder and greater bloodshed in Mexico, especially in the northern states, but as viewed here it also marks a decided step toward the final overthrow of Huerta. Carranza repeatedly has boasted that if the embargo on arms were lifted he would be in Mexico City within thirty days. This statement, however, has been accepted here with a good deal of reservation.

The president's order will tend to hasten the crisis in the Mexican situation. It would cause no surprise here if the resentment of Huerta leads him immediately to hand Nelson O'Shaughnessy, the American charge, his passports.

The lifting of the embargo marks the departure by the administration from its policy of "watchful waiting." The president in promulgating the order made it clear that he was actuated chiefly by the conviction that the present prohibition against shipments of munitions of war to the Constitutionalists stood in the way of establishing orderly and lawful government in Mexico. The president's statement is plainly a word of encouragement to the Constitutionalists and an invitation to them to pitch in and accomplish the elimination of Huerta as soon as possible. The president holds that no constitutional government now exists in Mexico and that the action of the United States in withholding arms from the Carranza force amounts to partiality in favor of a faction in Mexico, who are opposed to free government.

By many here it is believed that the next logical step of the Wilson administration will be a formal recognition of the Carranza government, provided the rebel leader's followers are able to establish themselves in Mexico City.

Charge O'Shaughnessy of the United States embassy at Mexico City was informed of the proclamation in advance of its issuance here, and was instructed to inform the Huerta government of the step taken by the president.

The fear here that Huerta may break off all diplomatic relations with Charge O'Shaughnessy is based chiefly on a statement made by the dictator not long ago when a report reached him that the president planned to lift the embargo. At that time he was quoted as saying that such action by this government would remove the need for any friendly interchanges between the United States and Mexico and he would furnish the United States charge with safe conduct out of the country. Reports have reached Washington that the announcement has resulted in a panicky exodus of Americans from Mexico City for Vera Cruz.

"WAR IS OVER," SAYS VILLA

What Lifting of Embargo Means in His Opinion.

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 4.—"The war is over."

This was Pancho Villa's first comment when told of President Wilson's decision to raise the embargo on arms and ammunition.

"I want to thank the United States for its action. President Wilson's decision does him honor, for it does justice to Mexico. With plenty of ammunition at our command the Constitutionalist revolution will sweep Huerta's forces from Mexico in a short while.

"Once more we have proof that the United States is the greatest friend the Mexican people have," said Villa. "This latest act of friendship will do more than anything else to bind the two countries together."

His eyes shone with delight and he walked nervously up and down the room. Friends crowded in to congratulate him. Cheers rose from different barracks around town as the news reached them.

"We could have been in Mexico City by now if we had possessed all the ammunition we needed," he said.

Retired Georgia Planter's Advice to Kidney Sufferers.

Regarding the wonderful curative merits of your Swamp-Root, I cannot say too much. After suffering severely for three years or more with severe pains caused by weak kidneys, I was finally induced to try Swamp-Root through a testimonial I read in one of the newspapers. I was in such a condition that I was obliged to arise from my bed six or eight times every night. I purchased a fifty-cent bottle and before it was used I felt so much relief that I purchased a one dollar bottle and by the time this was taken the old pains had left my back and I could sleep the whole night through. I am a retired planter, 70 years of age, and owing to Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, I am in the best of health and feel like a boy. I am always glad to recommend Swamp-Root to those who are in need of it.

Sincerely yours,

FIGHT IT OUT ATTITUDE.

It is impossible to predict at this time just what effect President Wilson's order removing all restrictions against the exportation of munitions of war into Mexico from United States will have upon the situation in that country. While President Wilson made only a brief explanation of the order, it is taken to mean that the United States war department intends to let Mexico settle its own trouble and that Americans will not take part in it unless the occasion should demand.

In 1912 President Taft issued a proclamation stating that a there existed in Mexico conditions of domestic violence which were promoted by the use of arms, the exportation of war munitions would be prohibited. It appears that since that order went into force President Huerta has been able to secure war supplies from other countries and the rebels have been placed at a decided disadvantage. Although President Wilson has stated that the United States is not taking sides in the Mexican situation his course in the past shows that he is inclined to favor the rebel forces in preference to Huerta's army. The proclamation issued Tuesday raising an embargo on arms gives the rebels a further advantage and expresses the belief that President Wilson would rather see them in control of the Mexican government.

The atitude of the United States toward the Mexican situation is of course followed closely by every nation of the world. It is naturally expected that the United States will take the initiative in any step towards the uutimate settlement of the trouble. However President Wilson has shown an inclination to keep the United States out of Mexico and his late order is saying to them, "Fight it out and the United States will recognize the victors."

Accompanying the proclamation President Wilson made the following explanation,—"Since that order was issued the circumstances of the case have undergone a radical change. There is now no constitutional government in Mexico, and the existence of this order hinders and delays the very thing the government of the United States is now insisting upon, namely, that Mexico shall be left free to settle her own affairs and as soon as possible to put them on constitutional footing by her own force and counsel. The order is, therefore, rescinded."

The war department has insisted that Japan is taking no part in the trouble in Mexico but despite such assertions it seems that Huerta has been assisted either directly or indirectly by the Japanese government. It is altogether possible that Japan's interest in Mexico and her assistance to Huerta were responsible for the removal of the embargo on war munitions, so that the rebel forces might better equip themselves for the bloody contests which will most certainly occur in the near future.

It is noticeable that President Wilson has given no consideration at all to the protection of American property in Mexico and his latest order has caused many Americans to flee to the coast as they believe that the fight will be more general and frequent throughout the country. President Wilson's policy has been to keep hands off and let the Mexicans settle their own differences. In the meantime the United States and other countries can only wait and listen and predict as to the ultimate outcome of the struggle now being waged by the factions in that country.

Veterans all over the country are indignant at the attempt recently made to change the American flag by inserting in the field of blue the cross of the Confederate flag. G. A. R. posts in all states have filed protests against the proposed change.

Washington, Feb. 4.—An unrestricted contest for the seizure by force of the presidency of Hayti is continuing in that republic, according to dispatches received here. RECURRENCE OF FLOOD DISASTER

How Best to Avert It Is the Problem.

GOVERNOR IS ASKED TO ACT

Chamber of Commerce at Indianapolis Has Taken the Matter Up and Has Asked Gov. Ralston to Name a Representative Commission Covering All Sections of State, to Devise Ways and Means for Flood Prevention.

Indianapolis, Feb. 4.—The chamber of commerce has presented a petition to Governor Ralston, asking that he name a commission to make a thorough study of the flood situation in Indiana with a view to making recommendations for legislation by the next general assembly and to co-operating with the Ohio authorities in a general scheme to prevent a recurrence of flood disasters in the state. The governor has asked the chamber of commerce to submit a list of names to be used in appointing such a commission, officials of the chamber say. The governor is to take up the matter soon.

The petition suggests that one resident of each congressional district in the state, with the governor as an ex officio member, serve on the commission. While such a commission would have no legal authority, the petition points out it is believed its work would be effective and that greater opportunities for free and open discussion of the problems would be forthcoming. The utmost necessity prevails for quick action in the premises, the petition declares.

"That vast sums of money will be required to solve this problem in Indiana is indicated by the results of the investigation which the Indianapolis chamber of commerce has made in many localities," the petition declares.

HOUSE DEMOCRATS BLOCK MOVEMENT

Votes for Women Not National Issue, They say.

Washington, Feb. 4.—A resolution was passed at a caucus of the house Democrats held last night, declaring that woman suffrage is a state and not a federal issue. The resolution was offered by Representative Heflin of Alabama, the most active opponent of equal suffrage in public life. The house Democrats voted 123 for the Heflin resolution to 57 against it. The caucus was called for the purpose of ratifying or reversing the previous action of the majority of the house committee on rules, which decided last month against a resolution providing for a standing committee on woman suffrage. The pro-suffragists among the Democrats circulated the call for the caucus in the hope that when they got a majority together they would, through fear of possible party defeat in the suffrage states, grant the request of the National Association for Woman Suffrage that the committee be created.

RED CROSS WILL SAVE THOUSANDS

Behind Great Humanitarian Project In China.

THE PREVENTION OF FLOODS

According to the Plan Worked Out by Executive Committee of American Red Cross, One of the Greatest Engineering Feats Ever Undertaken Will Make Safe the Hawi Valley.

New York, Feb. 4.—If the Chinese government issues and is able to dispose of $20,000,000 worth of bonds which it has agreed to float, a local engineering projects ever known, the instance of the Red Cross, undertake one of the greatest humanitarian and engineering projects ever known the prevention of floods in the Hawi river valley in China.

A telegram from Miss Mabel Boardman, chairman of the executive committee of the Red Cross, announced to the corporation that it had been designated to do the work which will, it is estimated, save thousands of lives and millions of dollars annually. The Chinese government named the Red Cross as its agent and the United States government has acquiesced in the entrance of American engineers in China.

The whole enterprise depends now upon the ability of the Chinese government to find a market for the proposed bond issue. It is anticipated that this will not be difficult, and the prospect is that American dollars as well as American workmen will have charge of the situation. Bankers here are expected to become subscribers to the issue, which will not, however, class the undertaking with dollar diplomacy, since the Red Cross has made the agreement with China.

A WAY OUT.

A Resident of Seymour Shows the Way.

There's one effective way to relieve kidney backache.

Liniment and plasters may relieve it;

But they seldom reach the cause.

Backache is cause to suspect the kidneys.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for disordered kidneys.

Seymour people back them up.

Read a case of it.

Mrs. Edward Utterbach, 227 W. Brown St., Seymour, Ind., says: "I used Doan's Kidney Pills a few years ago when I was suffering from dull pains across the small of my back and other troubles, caused by my kidneys. This remedy cured me and at that time I publicly told of my experience. I am now pleased to confirm my former statement."

Mrs. Utterbach is only one of many Seymour people who have gratefully endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills. If your back aches—if your kidneys bother you, don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidny Pills, the same that Mrs. Utterbach had—the remedy backed by home testimony. 50c all stores. CHAPTER XI.

Sanctuary.

The tawny scudding streak that led that long chase had shot into the yard,

He Craned His Neck, but It Had Passed the Line of His Vision.

turning for a last desperate double. It saw the man in the foreground and its bounding, agonized little wild heart that, so prayed for life gave way. With a final effort, it gained the porch and crouched down in its corner, an abject, sweated, hunted morsel, at hopeless bay.

Like a flash, Valiant stooped, caught the shivering thing by the scruff, and as its snapping jaws grazed his thumb, dropped it through the open window behind him: "Sanctuary!" quoth he, and banged the shutter to.

At the same instant, as the place overflowed with a pandemonium of nosing leaping hounds, he saw the golden chestnut reined sharply down among the ragged box-rows, with a shamefaced though brazen knowledge that the girl who rode it had seen.

She sat moveless, her head high, one hand on the hunter's foam-flecked neck, and their glances met like crossed swords. The look stirred something vague and deep within him. For an unforgettable instant their eyes held each other, in a gaze rigid, challenging, almost defiant; then it broke and she turned to the rest of the party spurring in a galloping zigzag: a genial-faced man of middle age in khaki who sat his horse like a cavalryman, a younger one with a reckless dark face and straight black hair, and following these a half-dozen youthful riders of both sexes, one of the lads heavily plastered with mud from a wet cropper, and the girls chiefly gasps and giggles.

The elder of the two men pulled up beside the leader, his astonished eyes sweeping the house-front, with its open blinds, the wisp of smoke curling from the kitchen chimney. He said something to her, and she nodded. The younger man, meanwhile, had flung himself from his horse, a wild-eyed roan, and with his arm thrust through its bridle, strode forward among the welter of hounds, where they scurried at fault, hither and thither, yelping and eager.

"What rotten luck!" he exclaimed. "Gone to ground after twelve miles! After him, Tawny! You mongrels! Do you imagine he's up a tree? After him, Bulger! Bring him here!"

He glanced up, and for the first time saw the figure in tweeds looking on. Valiant was attracted by his face, its dash and generosity overlying its inherent profligacy and weakness. Dark as the girl was light, his features had the same delicate chiseling, the inbreeding, nobility and indulgence of generations. He stared a moment, and the somewhat supercilious look traveled over the gazer, from dusty boots to waving brown hair.

"Oh!" he said. His view slowly took in the evidences of occupation. "The house is open, I see. Going to get it fit for occupancy, I presume?"

"Yes."

The other turned. "Well, Judge Chalmers, what do you think of that? The unexpected has happened at last." He looked at the porch. "Who's to occupy it?"

"The owner."

"Wonders will never cease!" said the young man easily, shrugging. "Well, our quarry is here somewhere. From the way the dogs act I should say he's bolted into the house. With your permission I'll take one of them in and see." He stooped and snapped a leash on a dog-collar.

"I'm really very sorry," said Valiant, "but I'm living in it at present."

The edge of a smile lifted the carefully trained mustache over the other's white teeth. It had the perfectly courteous air of saying, "Of course, if you say so. But—"

Valiant turned, with a gesture that included all. "If you care to dismount and rest," he said, "I shall be honored, though I'm afraid I can't offer you such hospitality as I should wish."

The judge raised his broad soft hat. "Thank you, sir," he said, with a soft accent that delightfully disdained the letter "r." "But we mustn't intrude any further. As you know, of course, the place has been uninhabited for any number of years, and we had no idea it was to acquire a tenant. You will overlook our riding through, I hope. I'm afraid the neighborhood has got used to considering this a sort of no-man's land. It's a pleasure to know that the Court is to be reclaimed, sir. Come along, Chilly," he added. "Our fox has a burrow under the house, I reckon—hang the cunning little devil!"

He waved his hat at the porch and turned his horse down the path, side by side with the golden chestnut. After them trooped the others, horses walking wearily, riders talking in low voices, the girls turning often to send swift bird-like glances behind them to where the straight masculine figure still stood with the yellow sunshine on his face. They did not leap the wall this time, but filed decorously through the swinging gate to the Red Road. Then, as they passed from view behind the hedges, John Valiant heard the younger voices break out together like the scund of a bomb thrown into a poultry-yard.

John Valiant stood watching till the last rider was out of sight. There was a warm flush of color in his face.

At length he turned with a ghost of a sigh, opened the hall door wide and stalking a hundred yards away, sat down on the shady grass and began to whistle, with his eyes on the door.

Presently he was rewarded. On a sudden, around the edge of the sill peered a sharp, suspicious little muzzle. Then, like a flash of tawny light, the fox broke sanctuary and shot for the thicket.

* * * * * * * * *

The brown ivied house in the village was big and square and faced the sleepy street. A one-storied wing contained a small door with a doctor's brass plate on the clapboarding beside it. Doctor Southall was one of Mrs. Merryweather Mason's paying guests—for she would have deemed the word boarder a gratuitous insult, no less to them than to her. Another was the major, who for a decade had occupied the big old-fashioned corner-room on the second floor, companioned by a monstrous gray cat and waited on by an ancient negro named Jereboam, who had been a slave of his father's.

The doctor was a sallow taciturn man with a saturnine face, eyebrows like frosted thistles, a mouth as if made with one quick knife-slash and a head nearly bald, set on a neck that would not have disqualified a yearling ox.

On this particular morning neither the major nor the doctor was in evidence, the former having gone out early, and the latter being at the moment in his office, as the brassy buzz of a telephone from time to time announced. Two of the green wicker rocking-chairs on the porch, however, were in agitant commotion. Mrs. Mason was receiving a caller in the person of Mrs. Napoleon Gifford.

"After all these years!" the visitor was saying in her customary italics. (The broad "a" which lent a dulcet softness to the speech of her hostess was scorned by Mrs. Poly, her own "a's" being as narrow as the needle through which the rich man reaches heaven.) "We came here from Richmond when I was a bride—that's twenty-one years ago—and Damory Court was forsaken then. And think what a condition the house must be in now! Cared for by an agent who comes every other season from New York. Trust a man to do work like that!"

"I'm glad a Valiant is to occupy it," remarked Mrs. Mason in her sweet flute-like voice. "It would be sad to see any one else there. For after all, the Valiants were gentlemen."

Mrs. Gifford sniffed. "Would you have called Devil-John Valiant a gentleman? Why, he earned the name by the dreadful things he did. My grandfather used to say that when his wife lay sick—he hated her, you know—he would gallop his horse with all his hounds full-cry after him under her windows. Then that ghastly story of the slave he pressed to death in the hogshead of tobacco."

"I know," acquiesced Mrs. Mason. "He was a cruel man and wicked, too. Yet of course he was a gentleman. In the South the test of a gentleman has never been what he does, but who he is. But his grandson, Beauty Valiant, who lived at Damory Court thirty years ago, wasn't his type at all. He was only twenty-five when the duel occurred."

"He must have been brilliant," said the visitor, "to have founded that great corporation. It's a pity the son didn't take after him. Have you seen the papers lately? It seems that though he was to blame for the wrecking of the concern they can't do anything to him. Some technicality in the law, I suppose. But if a man is only rich enough they can't convict him of anything. Why he should suddenly make up his mind to come down here I can't see. With that old affair of his father's behind him, I should think he'd prefer Patagonia."

"I take it, then, madam," Doctor Southall's forbidding voice rose from the doorway, "that you are familiar with the circumstances of that old affair, as you term it?"

The lady bridled. Her passages at arms with the doctor did not invariably tend to sweeten her disposition. "I'm sure I only know what people say," she said.

"'People?'" snorted the doctor irascibly. "Just another name for a community that's a perfect sink of meanness and malice. If one believed all he heard here he'd quit speaking to his own grandmother."

"You will admit, I suppose," said Mrs. Gifford with some spirit, "that the name Valiant isn't what it used to be in this neighborhood?"

"I will, madam," responded the doctor. "When Valiant left this place (a mark of good taste, I've always considered it) he left it the worse, if possible, for his departure. Your remark, however, would seem to imply demerit on his part. Was he the only man who ever happened to be at the lucky end of a dueling-ground?"

"Then it isn't true that Valiant was a dead shot and Sassoon intoxicated?"

"Madam," said the doctor, "I have no wish to discuss the details of that unhappy incident with you or anybody else. I was one of those present, but the circumstances you mention have never been descanted upon by me."

"I see by the papers," said Mrs. Gifford, with an air of resignedly changing the subject, "they've been investigating the failure of the Valiant Corporation. The son seems to be getting the sharp end of the stick. Perhaps he's coming down here because they've made it so hot for him in New York. Well, I'm afraid he'll find this county disappointing."

"He will that!" agreed the doctor savagely. "No doubt he imagines he's coming to a kindly countryside of gentle-born people with souls and imaginations; he'll find he's lit in a section that's entirely too ready to hack at his father's name and prepared in advance to call him Northern scum and turn up its nose at his accent—a community so full of dyed-in-the-wool snobbery that it would make Boston look like a poor-white barbecue. I'm sorry for him!"

Just then from the rear of the house came a strident voice:

"Yo', Raph'el! Take yo' han's outer dem cherries! Don' yo' know ef yo' swallahs dem ar pits, yo' gwineter hab 'pendegeetus en lump up en die?"

The sound of a slap and shrill yelp followed, and around the porch dashed an infantile darkey, as nude as a black Puck, with his hands full of cherries, who came to a sudden demoralized stop in the embarrassing foreground.

"Ralph!" thundered the doctor. "Didn't I tell you to go back to that kitchen?"

"Yes, suh," responded the imp. "But yo' didn' tell me ter stay dar!"

"If I see you out here again," roared the doctor, I'll tie your ears back—and grease you—and SWALLOW you!" At which grisly threat, the apparition, with a shrill shriek, turned and ran desperately for the corner of the house.

"I hear," said the doctor, resuming, "that the young man who came to fix the place up has hired Uncle Jefferson and his wife to help him. Who's responsible for that interesting information?"

"Rickey Snyder," said Mrs. Mason. "She's got a spy-glass rigged up in a sugar-tree at Miss Mattie Sue's and she saw them pottering around there this morning."

"Little limb!" exclaimed Mrs. Gifford, with emphasis. "She's as cheeky as a town-hog. I can't imagine what Shirley Dandridge was thinking of when she brought that low-born child out of her sphere."

Something like a growl came from the doctor as he struck open the screen-door. "'Limb!' I'll bet ten dollars she's an angel in a cedar-tree at a church fair compared with some better-born young ones I know of who are only fit to live when they've got the scarlet-fever and who ought to be in the reformatory long ago. And as for Shirley Dandridge, it's my opinion she and her mother and a few others like her have got about the only drops of the milk of human kindness in this whole abandoned community!"

"Dreadful man!" said Mrs. Gifford, sotto voce, as the door banged viciously. "To think of his being born a Southall! Sometimes I can't believe it!"

Mrs. Mason shook her head and smiled. "Ah, but that isn't the real Doctor Southall," she said. "That's only his shell."

"I've heard that he has another side," responded the other with guarded grimness, "but if he has, I wish he'd manage to show it sometimes."

Mrs. Mason took off her glasses and wiped them carefully. "I saw it when my husband died," she said softly. "That was before you came. They were old friends, you know. He was sick almost a year, and the doctor used to carry him out here on the porch every day in his arms, like a child. And then, when the typhus came that summer among the negroes, he quarantined himself with them—the only white man there—and treated and nursed them and buried the dead with his own hands, till it was tampe! out. That's the real Doctor Southall."

The rockers vibrated in silence for a moment. Then Mrs. Gifford said: "I never knew before that he had anything to do with that duel. Was he one of Valiant's seconds?"

"Yes," said Mrs. Mason; "and the major was the other. I was a little girl when it happened. I can barely remember it, but it made a big sensation."

"And over a love-affair!" exclaimed Mrs. Gifford in the tone of one to whom romance was daily bread.

"I suppose it was."

For a time the conversation languished. Then Mrs. Gifford asked suddenly: "Who do you suppose she could have been?—the girl behind that old Valiant affair."

Mrs. Mason shook her head. "No one knows for certain—unless, of course, the major or the doctor, and I wouldn't question either of them for worlds. You see, people had stopped gossiping about it before I was out of school. There's Major Bristow at the gate now. And the doctor's just coming out again."

The major wore a suit of white linen, with a broad-brimmed straw hat, and a pink was in his buttonhole, but to the observing, his step might have seemed to lack an accustomed jauntiness. As he came up the path the doctor opened his office. "How do you feel this morning, Major."

"Feel?" rumbled the major; "the way any gentleman ought to feel this time of the morning, sah. Like hell, sah."

The doctor bent his gaze on the hilarious blossom in the other's lapel. "If I were you, Bristow," he said scathingly, "I reckon I'd quit galivanting around to bridge-fights with perfumery on my handkerchief every evening. It's the devil of an example to the young."

The rocking-chairs behind the screening vines became motionless, and the ladies exchanged surreptitious smiles. If the two gentlemen were aware of each other's sterling qualities, their mutual appreciation was in inverse ratio to its expression, and, as the Elucinian mysteries, cloaked before the world. In public the doctor was wont to remark that the major talked like a Caesar, looked like a piano-tuner and was the only man he had ever seen who could strut sitting down. Never were his gibes so barbed as when launched against the major's white-waistcoated and patrician calm, and conversely, never did the major's bland suavity so nearly approach an undignified irritation as when receiving the envenomed darts of that accomplished cynic.

The major settled his black tie. "A little wholesome exercise wouldn't be a bad thing for you, Doctor," he said succinctly. "You're looking a shade pasty today."

"Exercise!" snapped the other viciously, as he pounded down the steps. "Ha, ha! I suppose you exercise—lazying out to the Dandridges once a week for a julep, and the rest of the time wearing out good cane-bottoms and palm-leaf fans and cussing at the heat. You'll go off with apoplexy one of these days."

"I shall if they're scared enough to call you," the major shot after him, nettled. But the doctor did not pause. He went on down the street without turning his head.

The major lifted his hat gallantly to the ladies, whose presence he had just observed.

"Do sit down, Major," said Mrs. Gifford. "There's a question I'm just dying to ask you. We've had such an interesting conversation. You've heard the news, of course, that young Mr. Valiant is coming to Damory Court?"

The major sat down heavily. In the bright light his face seemed suddenly pale and old.

"No?" the lady's tone was arch. "Have all the rest of us really got ahead of you for once? Yes, it's true. There's some one there getting it to rights Now here's the question. There was a woman, of course, at the bottom of the Valiant duel. I'd never dream of asking you who she was. But which was it she loved, Valiant or Sassoon?"

Pimples Source of Great Danger

May be Means of Absorbing Disease Germs in Most Unexpected Manner.

Make Your Blood Pure and Immune With S. S. S.

In thousands of instances the most virulent types of blood troubles have been the result of coming in contact with disease germs in public places, and the apparently insignificant pimple has been the cause. It spreads with astonishing rapidity, often infecting the entire system in a few days.

It is fortunate, however, that there is a remedy to cope quickly and thoroughly with such a condition, and thanks to the energy of its producers the famous S. S. S. may now be had at most any drug store in the civilized world.

This preparation stands alone as a blood purifier. It is somewhat revolutionary in its composition, since it accomplishes all that was ever claimed for mercury, iodides, arsenic, and other destructive mineral drugs, and yet it is absolutely a purely vegetable product. It contains one ingredient which serves the active purpose of stimulating each tiny cellular part of the tissues to the healthy and judicious selection of its own essential nutriment. There are more cases of articular rheumatism, locomotor ataxia, paresis, neuritis, and similar diseases resultant from the use of minerals than most people are aware of. These facts are brought out in a highly interesting book compiled by the medical department of The Swift Specific Co., 217 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. It is mailed free, together with special information, to all who write describing their symptoms.

Get a bottle of S. S. S. to-day, but be careful not to have something palmed off on you falsely claimed to be "just as good."

HOUSEKEEPERS Must be Watchful

For great efforts are being made in this vicinity to sell baking powders of inferior class, made from alum acids and lime phosphates, both undesirable to those who require high-grade cream of tartar baking powder to make clean and healthful food.

The official Government tests have shown Royal Baking Powder to be a pure, healthful, grape cream of tartar baking powder, of highest strength, and care should be taken to prevent the substitution of any other brand in its place.

Royal Baking Powder costs only a fair price per pound, and is cheaper and better at its price than any other baking powder in the world.

M'DEVITT TAKES HIS STATUE TO CAPITAL

Wants Congress to Land It Among Immortals.

Washington, Feb. 4.—Greeted by a crowd of hundreds and heralded by a fanfare of trumpets, "Millionaire-for-a-Day" John Jay (Butch) McDevitt of Wilkesbarre, Pa., invaded Washington yesterday afternoon by special train. He immediately boarded an automobile and started on a tour of the city, preceded by the marine band.

The special train in which he started from his native city, Wilkesbarre was halted for fifteen minutes at the station by McDevitt long enough to permit a crowd of the curious to inspect the statue of himself that he would like congress to place in Statuary hall in the capitol. The statue reposed on the observation platform at the rear of his special and bore a striking resemblance to the rather attenuated figure of the man who gained considerable notoriety a year ago by playing the role of a "millionaire-for-a-day" on Broadway.

Striking a statesmanlike attitude, "Butch" expressed the utmost scorn for Bryan, Roosevelt and other Americans who he declared had not as much right as he had to be placed among the immortals in Statuary hall.

"Some people think I am dippy," he said, "but, take it from me, I am not. There is a difference between insanity and eccentricity, usually a few thousand dollars. I like to be fed on notoriety. I admit it. Others don't.

"Say, if congress won't have my statue I'll take it to England or Ireland. I think the best place for it would be Ireland. I would get a slice of ground and put it on it. I would like to go to Ireland and be a 'King for a day.' I certainly would stir up the Emerald Isle."

TWO CAN PUSH HARDER THAN ONE

That is literally true when both are pushing in the same direction.

It clearly states the case regarding the new idea of co-operative work between dealer and manufacturer for the pushing of goods advertised in the newspapers.

In this case both are pushing in the same direction towards increased sales and better service to the consumer.

It is the most practical merchandising idea that has been suggested in half a century and is another evidence of the great power peculiar to the newspapers of this country as a sales producing agency.

Advertisers long ago realized that the newspapers were the surest and most efficient advertising medium.

But they did not begin to reach the great depths of productiveness which the newspapers afforded, until the possibilities of co-operative campaigning became apparent.

This year more articles of national reputation will be advertised in the newspapers than ever before, and in nearly every instance this will be backed up by earnest exploitation on the part of the local merchants.

Any manufacturer or merchant interested in this co-operative work is invited to address the American Newspaper Publishers Association, Bureau of Advertising, World Building, New York City.

Give Up Medical School.

At the 50th annual dinner of the Dartmouth Alumni Association of New York, given here last night, Ernest Fox Nichols, president of Dartmouth College, explained that his college had been obliged to drop medicine from its course because the environments of Dartmouth do not furnish the necessary opportunity for clinical study.

He said the college is not situated in a congested and impoverished district, which fosters disease, and accident cases necessary to train medical students are likewise infrequent.

The medical school of the college, he said, had been in existence for 116 years, but under the circumstances its elimination had been inevitable.

The above is taken from one of the Boston newspapers. It is of local interest in the fact that Dartmouth was the college of M. S. Blish and the late A. P. Charles, of this city. The latter was mayor of Seymour from 1872 to 1878.

Mrs. James Cunningham, of Brownstown, was in the city today.

BETTER COUNT YOUR CASH, YOU MAY HAVE BAD DOLLAR

Secret Service Department Says Not More Than $3 in Every $100,000 Are Spurious.

By United Press.

Washington, Feb. 4—If you have $100,000 in silver and $200,000 in bills hid away in a woolen sock under the mattress or horded in a tin box under an apple tree you are probably hoarding $4 in counterfeit money.

Nobody knows just how much bad money is in circulation, for obviously a perfect counterfeit could never be detected. But perfection is as scarce among bad bills as it is among good men, and after close tabulations covering a period of a year the United States Secret Service has come to the conclusion that not more than $3 in every $100,000 of silver nor more than $1 in every $200,000 of bills is spurious.

To the Secret Service office there goes eventually every piece of counterfeit money discovered. It is the great purifying plant of the stream of our national currency, though it is only one of its vital functions. The appearance of a new counterfeit is to the Secret Service what the clang of the gong is to a fire department. No matter how astute the counterfeiter, he cannot carry his operations far until the service "has a line on him," his methods, accomplices, and characteristics, and his apprehension is usually but a matter of days.

There is an erroneous idea, very generally held, that paper money is printed on paper manufactured by a secret process which is carefully guarded from the public. The truth is that almost any paper house could make the identical paper were it not prohibited by law from doing so. The matter of getting the silk fibres into the fabric is comparatively simple, and the appearance of these tiny shreds, often cleverly imitated with a fine pen, not infrequently induces the inexperienced to accept a counterfeit bill of which they are suspicious.

With the development of photo-engraving the shady art of counterfeiting received a big impetus. Prior to that industry only experts could hope to produce bills that would pass even casual inspection. And as man's handiwork always expresses his individuality the "thumb print" of every counterfeiter was literally on every bill he put out.

Today, however, bills may be duplicated by a purely mechanical process. But the lines are heavy and uneven, and while such a reproduction may get by an inexperienced clerk the expert can spot it at a glance.

TO CURB ACTIVITIES OF NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

Senate Banking Committee Opened Hearings Today on Proposed New Measures.

By United Press.

Washington, Feb. 4—Curbs on the activities of the New York Stock Exchange were proposed in bills on which the senate banking committee today opened hearings. These measures would impose severe penalties for the use of the mails in connection with the speculative transactions.

Regarding the hearing, Senator Owen said:—"We should like to have it known that we are not actuated by any spirit of hostility. We merely want to frame a bill that will correct the flagrant abuses which were so thoroughly shown up in the money trust investigation. We want to protect legitimate business and put an end to the use of the mails in promoting fraudulent speculations. We believe that we will have the sympathy of all honest financiers and business men in the work. The president, we know, is in sympathy with the general proposition for such legislation. James B. Mahon, president of the New York Stock Exchange, headed a delegation which today protested against the legislation. In an interview, Mahon declared, "Our opposition is based on the rejection by the Hughes commission of teh suggestion to incorporate exchanges and the defeat of the incorporation measure at Albany early last fall."

U. S. Catholics Gave Most.

By United Press.

Rome, Feb. 4—The United States led the entire world in its donations to the Vatican in 1913 for the carrying on of missionary work. The total American contribution was nearly $400,000. England contributed only $20,000 and Austria which is the most loyal Catholic country in the world gave $12,666. An appeal had been made by Pope Pius for increased donations during the year as a result of the Vatican's celebration of Constantine year. The results show that the United States was the only country which actually responded by giving more than in previous years.
